CHAPTER VI.

After this Clement never made a stay of any length in his father's house. Each time he came, he found him harsher and more intolerant. His mother was tender and loving as before, but more reserved; Marlene was calm, but mute whenever they became earnest in discussion. At such times she would rather avoid being present.

On a bright day towards the end of autumn, we find Clement again in the small room where, as a boy, he had spent those weeks of convalescence. One of his friends and fellow-students, had accompanied him home. They had gone through their course at the University, and had just returned from a longer tour than usual, during which Wolf had fallen ill, and had desired to come home in the quiet of village life. Clement could not but acquiesce, though of all the young men he knew, Wolf was the one, he thought, least likely to please his father. But, contrary to his expectations, the stranger prudently and cleverly contrived to adapt himself perfectly to the opinions of the old couple; especially winning the mother's good will, by the merry interest he manifested in household matters. He gave her some good advice, and even succeeded in curing her of some little ailment with a very simple remedy. He had been preparing himself to follow his uncle in his business as apothecary—an avocation far beneath that for which his natural talents and acquirements would have fitted him; but he was by nature indolent, and was quite contented to settle down and eat his cake betimes.

Mentally, he never had anything in common with Clement; and on first coming to this vicarage, he had felt himself in an atmosphere so oppressive and uncongenial, that he would have left it after the most superficial recovery, had not the blind girl, from the first moment he saw her, appeared to him as a riddle worth his reading.

She had avoided him as much as possible; the first time he had taken her hand she had withdrawn it with unaccountable uneasiness, and had entirely lost the usual composure of her manner. Yet he would remain in her society for hours, studying her method of apprehending things, and with a playful kind of importunity which it was not easy to take amiss, taking note of her ways and means of communication with the outer world.

He could not understand why Clement appeared to care for her so little—and Clement would avoid her more than ever when he saw her in company with Wolf. He would turn pale then, and escape to the distant forest, where the villagers would often meet him, plunged in most disconsolate meditations.

One evening when he was returning from a long discontented walk, where he had gone too far and lost himself, he met Wolf in a state of more than natural excitement. He had been paying a long visit to Marlene, who had fascinated him more than usual; he had then found his way to the village tavern, where he had drunk enough of the light wine of the country to make him glad of a cool walk among the fields in the fresh evening air.

"I say!" he called to Clement. "It may be a good while yet before you are so fortunate as to get rid of me. That little blind witch of yours is a pretty puzzle to me. She is cleverer than a dozen of our town ladies, who only use their eyes to gild God and man—and then that delicate way she has of snubbing me, is a masterpiece in itself."

"You may be glad if she ends by making you a little wiser," said Clement shortly.

"Fame!" That, I shall never be; and that magnificent figure and lovely face of hers are not calculated to make a fellow man. Don't believe I mean to harm her. Only you know, sometimes I think if she were to be fond of one, there would be something peculiar in it. A woman who can't see—who can only feel, and feel as no other creature can—I say if such a woman were to fall upon a fellow man, I say, the feeling might prove especially pleasant to them both."

"And I say, you had better keep your sayings to yourself."

"Why? Where's the harm? What harm would there be in making her fall just a very little bit in love with me, to see how her nerves would carry her through the scrape? In general, so much fire finds its safety valve in the eyes, but here,—"

"I must beg you to refrain from making any such experiments," flared up Clement. "I tell you very seriously that I do not choose to see or hear anything of the kind, and so you may act accordingly."

Wolf gave a sidelong look at him, and, taking hold of his arm, said with a laugh, "I do believe you really are in love with the girl, and want to try a few experiments yourself. How long have you been so scrupulous? You have often heard me out, before now, when I have told you what I thought of women."

"Your education is no concern of mine. What have I to do with your unclean ideas? But when I find them soiling one so near and dear to me, one who is twenty times too good for you to breathe the same air, that is what I can and will prevent."

"Oh!" said Wolf, tranquilly; "too good you say; too good? It is you who are too good a fellow, Clement, far too good, so take yourself away out of my air, good lad."

He clapped him on the back, and would have moved on.

Clement stood still, and turned white. "You will be so good as to explain the meaning of those words," he said, resolutely.

"No such fool—ask others if you wish to know. Others may be fond of preaching to deaf ears—I am not."

"What others? What do you mean? Who is it dares to speak slightly of her? I say who dares?" He held Wolf with an iron grasp.

"Foolish fellow," he growled, "you are spoiling my walk with your foolish questions; let me go, will you?"

"You do not stir a step until you have given me satisfaction," cried Clement, getting furious.

"Don't I? Go to the devil's son if you are jealous. Poor devil! to coax him so, till he was ready to jump out of his skin for her, and then to throw him over! Fie! was it honest?"

He came to pour out his grievances to me, and I comforted him. She is just what all women are, says I, a coquette. It is my turn now, but we are up to a thing or two, you know, and may not be inclined to let our mouths be stopped, when we would warn other fellows from falling into the same snare."

"Retract those words!" shouted Clement, shaking Wolf's arm in a paroxysm of rage.

"Why retract, if they are true and I can prove them? You are but a simpleton!"

"And you a devil!"

"Oh! I say, it may be your time to retract now."

"I won't retract."

"Then I suppose you know the consequences. You shall hear from me as soon as I get to town."

And having thus spoken in cold blood, he turned back to the village. Clement remained standing where he was.

"Villain! miserable scoundrel!" fell from his lips. His bosom heaved, a cruel pain had coiled itself about his heart; he flung himself flat upon the ground among the corn and lay there long, recalling a thousand times each one of those words that had made him feel so furious.

When he came home at a very late hour, he was surprised to find the family still assembled. Wolf was missing. The vicar was pacing violently up and down the room. His wife and Marlene were seated with their work in their laps, much against their custom at so late an hour. On Clement's entrance the vicar stopped, and gravely turned to look at him.

"What have you been doing to your friend? Here he has packed up and gone while we were all out walking, leaving a hasty message. When we came home, we only found the man who had come to fetch his things. Have you been quarrelling? else why should he be in such a hurry?"

"We had high words together. I am glad to find that he is gone, and that I shall not have to sleep another night under the same roof with him."

"And what were your angry words about?"

"I cannot tell you, father. I should have been glad to avoid a quarrel, but there are things to which no honest man can listen. I have long known him to be coarse and careless in feeling, both with regard to himself and others, but I never saw him as he was to-day."

The vicar looked steadily at his son, and then in a low tone: "How do you mean to settle this quarrel between you?" he asked.

"As young men do," said Clement, gravely.

"And do you know what Christians do, when they have been offended?"

"I know, but I cannot do the same; if he has only offended me, I might easily have forgiven him, but he has insulted one who is very dear to me."

"A woman, Clement?"

"A woman. Yes."

"And you love this woman?"

"I love her," murmured the young man.

"I thought so," burst out his father. "Yes! you have been corrupted in the town. You are become as the children of this world, who follow wanton wenches, fight for them, and make idols of them; but I tell you, while I live, I shall labor to win you back to God. I will smash your idols. Did the Lord vouchsafe to work a miracle for you, for you to deny Him now? Far better have remained in darkness, with those gates closed forever, through which the devil and all his snares have entered in, and taken possession of your heart."

The young man had some struggle to suppress his rising passion. "Who gave you the right, father, to suppose my inclinations to be so base?" he said. "Am I degraded because I am forced to do what is needful in the world we live in, to crush the insolence of the base? There are diverse ways of wrestling with the evil one; yours is the peaceful way, for you have the multitude to deal with. I have the individual, and I know that way."

"It is a way you shall not go," hotly returned the father. "I say you shall not trample on God's commands. He is no son of mine, who would do violence to his brother. I prohibit it with the authority of a parent and a priest. Beware of setting that authority at naught!"

"And so you spurn me from your house," said Clement, gloomily. A pause ensued. His mother, who had burst into tears, now rose, and rushed up to her son. "Mother," he said, earnestly, "I must be a man—I cannot be a traitor. He went towards the door, with one look at Marlene, whose poor blind eyes were searching painfully. His mother followed him—she could not speak for sobbing. "Do not detain him, wife," said the vicar, "he is no child of ours, since he refuses to be God's; let him go whither he pleases, to us, he is as dead."

Marlene heard the door close and the vicar's wife fall heavily to the ground, with a cry that came from the depths of her mother's heart.

She woke from the trance in which she had been sitting, went to the door, and with an immense exertion, she carried the insensible woman to her bed. The vicar stood at the window and never uttered a word; but his folded hands were trembling violently.

About a quarter of an hour later, a knock came to Clement's door. He opened it, and saw Marlene. She entered quietly. The room was in disorder—she struck her foot against the trunk. "What are you going to do, Clement?"

The stubbornness of his grief softened at once—he took her hands and pressed them to his eyes which were wet with tears. "I must do it," he cried. "I have long felt that I have lost his love. Perhaps when I am gone, he may feel that I have never ceased to be his son."

She raised him up and said, "Do not weep, or I shall never have strength to tell you what I have to say. Your mother would say the same if your father did not prevent her. And even he—I heard by his voice how difficult he found it to be so hard. Yet hard he will remain, for I know him well. He believes that he is serving the Lord by being severe, and serving him best by sacrificing his own heart."

"And you think the same?"

"No, I don't, Clement. I don't know much about the world, nor the laws of that opinion that forces a man to fight a duel; but I do know you enough to know that every one of your thoughts and actions—and therefore this duel also—is submitted to the severest test of self-examination. You may owe it to the world, and to her you love—only I think you owe your parents more than either. I do not know the person who has been insulted, and do not quite feel why it should make you so indignant, to be prevented doing this for her. Do not interrupt me. Do not suppose me to be influenced by the fear of losing any remnant of our friendship, which you may have retained during the years that have parted us. I would be willing to let her have you all to herself, if she be able to make you happy; but not even for her sake should you do what you are about to do, were she dearer to you than either father or mother. From their house you must not go in anger, at the risk of its being closed to you forever. Your father is old, and will carry his opinions with him to the grave. If he were to give way to you, it would be at the sacrifice of principles which are the very pith and marrow of his life; and the sacrifice on your side, would be merely the evanescent estimation in which you believe yourself to be held by strangers. If a woman whom you love could break with you because you are unwilling to smother the last years of your father's life, that woman, I say, was never worthy of you."

Her voice failed her; he threw himself on a chair and groaned.

She was still standing by the door, waiting to hear what he would say; and there was a strange look of tension about her brow—she seemed to be listening with her eyes. Suddenly he sprang to his feet, laid his two hands on her shoulders, and cried: "It was for you I would have done this, and now for your sake I will not do it;" and rushing past her he ran down stairs.

She remained where she was. His last words had thrilled to her very marrow, and a sudden tide of gladness broke over that timid, doubting heart of hers. She set down on the portmanteau trembling all over. "It was for you!" for you!

The words echoed in her ear. She half dreaded his return; if he should not mean what she thought! and how could he mean it? What was she to him?

She heard him coming upstairs again. In her agitation she rose, and would have left the room, but he met her at the door, and taking her in his arms, he told her all.

"It was I who was blind," he cried, "and you who saw—who saw prophetically. Without you, where should I have been now? An orphan without a future, without a home; banished from the only hearts I love, and by my own miserable delusions. And now—now they are all my own again; mine and more than I ever believed to be mine—more than I could have trusted myself to possess." She hung upon his neck in mute devotion; mute for the very scorn of the poverty of language. The long repressed fervor of her devotion had broken loose, and burned in her silent kiss.

Day dawned upon their happiness. Now he knew what she had so obstinately concealed, and what this very room had witnessed; where now, pledged to each other for life, with a grasp of each other's hands, they parted in the early morning.

In the course of the day a letter came from Wolf, written the night before, from the nearest village. Clement might be at rest, he wrote; he retracted everything; he knew best that what he had said was nonsense. He had spoken in anger and in wine.

It had provoked him to see Clement going about so indifferent and cool, when, with a word, he might have taken possession of such a treasure. And when he saw that Clement really did mean to do so, he had reviled what he had been denied to him.

He begged Clement not to think worse of him than he deserved, and to make his excuses to the young girl and to his parents, and not to break with him entirely and forever.

When Clement read this to Marlene, she was rather touched. "I can be sorry for him now," she said, "though I always felt uneasy when he was here—and how much he might have spared us both, and spared himself! But I can think of him with charity now—we have so much to thank him for."

THE NATHAN MURDER.

FULL PARTICULARS OF THE HORRIBLE AFFAIR
—OFFICIAL INVESTIGATIONS.

We take from the New York Tribune of July 29th, the following account of the shocking and mysterious murder of Benjamin Nathan, a wealthy citizen of New York, some particulars of which have reached us by telegraph:

THE MURDER.

A terrible tragedy took place before daylight yesterday in the premises, No. 12 West Twenty-third street, directly opposite the Fifth Avenue Hotel, in one of the most public places in the city, the victim being the head of the household, the well-known broker, Benjamin Nathan. The circumstances connected with the affair, notwithstanding the efforts of the police thus far, are still enveloped in mystery. On Thursday Mr. Nathan, instead of joining his wife and the younger members of his family at their country seat at Morristown, N. J., proceeded to their house in West Twenty-third street. A temporary bed, consisting of three mattresses and other clothing, had been made up in the reception room on the second floor. Soon after eleven, p. m., Mr. Nathan, who was a man of very regular habits, retired to bed. His elder son, Washington, who, with a younger brother, Frederick, occupied rooms on the third floor, returned home about half-past eleven p. m., calling at his father's rooms, and asked him if Washington had returned from a call on some friends, having left early in the evening for that purpose. Mr. Nathan replied in the negative, and Frederick then bade him good-night, and went to his room on the floor above.

The other son, Washington, came in between twelve and one, and, as was his custom, called at his father's room to bid him good-night. He called to his father, and receiving no response, believed his parent to be asleep, and not wishing to awaken him, went to his own room on the floor above, adjoining that of his brother, and retired. The only persons in the house beside Mr. Nathan and his sons were Mrs. Ann Kelly, the housekeeper, an elderly lady, and her son William, a man of twenty-five years. Mrs. Kelly slept on the rear of the second floor, and her son on the fourth floor.

Yesterday was the anniversary of the death of Mr. Benjamin Nathan's mother, and according to the precepts of the Jewish faith, Mr. Nathan and his sons intended in the morning to visit the Nineteenth street Synagogue and commemorate the event by offering up prayers for the repose of her soul. It was for this purpose that Mr. Nathan remained in town, instead of joining his wife and family at Morristown. Shortly before six a. m., Washington Nathan descended to his father's room to awaken him, thinking he had overslept himself, and to remind him that it was time to go to the synagogue. On crossing the threshold of the room, the son was horrified to see his father lying on the floor in a pool of blood, and with all the evidence of a fearful struggle around him. The son examined his father, found him to be dead, and then gave an alarm, arousing the other members of the household. He was soon joined by his brother, and together they left the house. Seeing officer John Mangum, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, a short distance away, they called to him, and he immediately ran to them. On being told that a murder had been committed, the officer gave an alarm rap, calling to his aid another officer, and they began a search of the house. Just inside the front door, in the hallway, officer Mangum found a ship carpenter's "dog," an iron instrument about eighteen inches in length, half hammer, half pick. With this instrument which could be used either as a hammer for smashing a lock, or as a "jimmy" to pry open a drawer, a terrible blow could be dealt anyone who should attempt to interfere with the person wielding it. This weapon had been dropped, undoubtedly, by the murderer in his flight. Officer Mangum examined it closely, and found spots of blood on it. These were found to be quite dry, showing that the attack on Mr. Nathan had been made with it several hours previously. Washington Nathan then recollected that when he came down stairs to give the alarm, he found the front hall door unfastened, although closed. Nevertheless, the house was thoroughly searched from garret to basement, but the murderers could not be found.

THE PREMISES.

Strangely enough, although Mrs. Kelly slept on the same floor as the murdered man, and the most of the doors were open, she heard nothing of the affray, although it was evident that a desperate struggle had taken place.

On visiting the room where Mr. Nathan lay, the officers found him lying just outside the door leading from the main room into a smaller office. He had on nothing but an under-shirt and a night-shirt. Both these garments were saturated with blood. The body also lay in a pool of blood, and the walls on either side of the doorway leading to the office were marked and bespattered with blood. The carpet, also, was soaked with blood. Evidently a desperate struggle had taken place before Mr. Nathan was overpowered and slain.

In one corner of the office mentioned was a small safe. This had been opened with a key obtained from the pantsloose pocket of the deceased. A tin box lay on the floor. The papers which it had contained were strewn over the floor, as also all the rest of the contents of the safe. The clothing of Mr. Nathan lay on the chairs where he had placed them the previous night. An examination of them showed that Mr. Nathan's watch and diamond studs had been stolen. It was evident that the deceased had been awakened by the noise made by the thief in rummaging the safe, and, springing from bed, had seized him. The thief, with the "dog" mentioned, had dealt him a number of blows on the head, and held the latter crushing in the skull.

Dr. Armstrong, of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, was called in, and after carefully examining the body, gave it as his opinion that Mr. Nathan had been dead from three to four hours. In his opinion the attack was made between the hours of one and two o'clock. Death must have been almost instantaneous after receiving the blows on the head.

OFFICIAL INVESTIGATIONS.

The news of the affair was telegraphed to Superintendent Jourdan, who, in company with Capt. Kelso and Detective Farley, visited the house, and carefully investigated the circumstances connected with the affair. The sons were so terribly excited that they could not for a time give any information, but gradually became calmer and gave such information as they were possessed of, which, indeed, was very little, and helped in no manner to give the detectives a clew to the murderer.

Officer Mangum was questioned closely by Superintendent Jourdan. He stated that he tried the front and basement doors of the house at 1:30 and again at 4:30 a. m., and at each time both doors were fast. He had tried it a third time but a minute or two before the sons of Mr. Nathan had called to him that their father had been murdered. He was certain that the door was closed all these hours; who ever committed the murder had closed the door by which he made his exit.

For several days previous, two carpenters had been engaged making repairs to the house. They are Wm. Smith of No. 256 West Fortieth street, and Philip Lehnmeister of No. 625 Hudson street. They were sent for and questioned. The only information they could impart was, that they were passing in and out of the basement door several times during the day, and it was occasionally left open. It would have been an easy matter for a thief to slip in this door and secrete himself in the house.

The clothes of Mr. Nathan were then examined. There was a slight stain of blood on the collar of the white muscades vest, and another on the shirt; but this was done by the elder brother in examining the clothing of his father after attempting to raise the corpse. It was certain that the thief had taken the watch and studs from the clothing, and then took the key of the safe. Why he did not take the wallet which contained a small sum of money and some papers, does not appear.

Mr. Nathan was very near-sighted, so much so that he never read by night, and without the aid of glasses could not see across the room. One of the blows received by him was across the back of the right hand, the bones of which were smashed. It is believed that this was the first blow struck by the thief, and was done for the purpose of breaking the grasp of Mr. Nathan. At the same time the thief struggled to free himself. Finding that he could not accomplish his object, he then dealt Mr. Nathan a blow on the forehead, but as this failed to accomplish its object, other blows were struck while the men struggled near the doorway leading into the office. One well directed blow at length felled him to the floor, and then, bending over him, the thief dealt other blows which effectually silenced the victim. There were found two wounds above the left temple. A third split the ear. A fourth was found to have taken effect near the base of the skull on the left side. The fifth extended from near the centre of the forehead to a point above the right ear, laying bare and for a considerable distance smashing in the skull. Either one of these five wounds would probably have occasioned death, and all were made by the "dog."

Superintendent Jourdan, and the officers with him, are of the opinion that the deed was the work of a professional thief, who had secreted himself in the house some time during the previous day, and waited until he believed his victim was fast asleep before he commenced the robbery. They do not believe that the murder was premeditated. The thief, finding himself detected and seized, had used his weapon in his desperation. There is no sign of blood in the smaller room in which is the safe. Apparently, the thief had met Mr. Nathan on the threshold of the door, and the struggle between them took place there. On the second floor are two toilet rooms, each containing several large black walnut clothes-presses, and in one of these a man could easily secrete himself. It is more than probable that the thief had watched the house for some time, ascertained that the majority of the occupants were away, and believing that it could easily be robbed, had made the attempt, with the result described. Every effort is making to trace and arrest the murderer. Superintendent Jourdan, Capt. Kelso, Detective Farley, and other detectives are engaged upon the case. Thus far nothing has been discovered that gives any clue to the murderer. The jewelry taken may, however, eventually lead to his discovery. The watch is one of Jurgensen's heavy double-cased gold chronometers, numbered 7,421, stem-winding, with a heavy gold chain, having long square links, and a gold pendant; with a seal and the monogram "B. N." The studs were diamond spirals, the diamonds being one and three-fourths karats each, and very clear fine stones. By order of Superintendent Jourdan, a general alarm was telegraphed to all the Police stations, directing the Captains of Police to see that all jewelers, pawnbrokers, and second-hand dealers in their respective precincts are furnished with an accurate description of the stolen articles, and warned to be on the lookout for them.

MR. DEUTSCH AT OXFORD.

Mr. Deutsch, in his recent speech at Oxford, said that the suggestion that the present square Hebrew character was perhaps derived from the "Samaritan" instead of being "primitive" brought down from Bianconi the whole of the Acts Eruditorum, which informed him that "that wisdom of his was scarcely sufficient to supercede the Divine wisdom." There was a notion abroad that to doubt the primacy of the Hebrew square character was to deny the Hebrew people.

The very fact of the identity of the character which we all (as well as the greater part of the whole civilized world) now use for common purposes, with those found on the scanty "Italic" or "Hellenic" monuments belonging to the darkest stages of the classical nation, or with those which appear on Phoenician tablets, or on that oldest of lapidary (alphabetical) Semitic records—the Moabite Stone—is apt to bring before us more vividly than any other order of science the thought of the solidarity of mankind; and we come to look upon all these varying, yet always similar, shapes of one and the same character, as great as interest as we would upon the hand-writing, if it had been preserved, of some great or beloved person in the manifold stages of that person's life. And considering the most wondrous way in which this Alphabet has shown itself equal to all emergencies, when poor and vowel-less, it found itself called upon to serve an endless variety of idioms, not merely of Semitic, but of Indo-Germanic sound, can we understand the transcendental admiration of the masters of the Mishnah, who place this invention among the "miracles created in the gloaming of the sixth day."

Mr. Deutsch said that, alluding to a certain other dead writing, on the wall, he would ask his hearers to come to the latter, but to weigh the former. Thus, that at the beginning of the expedition, Capt. Warren and Wilson went about taking photographs; and among these, one represented a stone with a Samaritan inscription, dating from the time before Justinian, and consequently the oldest in that character. It is inscribed upside down in a miniature near Nabat, belonging to a Mohammedan sanctuary, called Elia Yusuf "the mourning of Jacob," for Joseph, of the Mosque of the Green Tree, because the erst-withered tree under which Jacob had sat there in his grief covered itself instantly with green leaves when the good news arrived from Egypt. This inscribed slab had once belonged to a synagogue. The table exhibits ten lines, the first eight of which contain the Ten Commandments according to the Samaritan recension, in an abbreviated form. The ninth forms a portion of the celebrated Samaritan interpolation after the Ten Commandments (from Deut. xxi. 2-7 and ix. 30): "And it shall be on the day when ye shall pass over Jordan, . . . on Mount Gerizim, . . . and thou shalt build there an altar unto the Lord thy God." The last line contains the formula from Exodus, of frequent use in Samaritan worship, viz., "Aries, O Lord; return O Lord!"

Mr. Deutsch spoke of another photograph, that of the inscription on the lintel of a ruined edifice at Kefr Birin; this inscription (in square Hebrew, with Latin letters) belongs to the second Christian century. Tradition marks the ruin as the sole remnant of the twenty-four synagogues erected here by Simon ben Yochai, the alleged author of the Zohar. The gist of the inscription was a prayer for "peace upon this place and all the places of Israel," and an indication of the builder's name. Mr. Deutsch alluded to the marks found on the bottom rows of the wall of the Haram, and had come to the conclusion that they were Phoenician marks made by masons or workmen, and consisted partly of mere quarry signs, such as occurred in Phoenicia proper. He had had the satisfaction of hearing from Jerusalem not long after he had ventured to predict the occurrence of similar signs in corresponding rows of the wall, that such signs had been actually found. The latter, however, though of the same character as those previously discovered, were too blurred to present any quite distinct letters or signs. He regretted to add, that the shafts which led to these marks were no longer accessible at present, and that all further search for similar signs had been given up from want of funds.

Mr. Deutsch then addressed himself to the Moabite Stone. It seemed to him striking sign of the value set in these days on such monuments, that three of the most powerful modern nations vied for the honor of acquiring it for their country. There was, owing to most unfortunate occurrences, great danger at one time of its utterly perishing. However, according to information communicated by Count de Vogue, all but a comparatively small portion had been recovered by this time, mainly through the energy of M. Ganneau. About four-fifths would be long by in the Louvre. He did not think it necessary to vindicate the genuineness of the monument, but he protested against the notion that a few "various readings," such as had occurred on the different copies taken from the "squeeze" were of no account. Let them think of Biblical or classical MSS., or even of their own legal or commercial documents, and see of what importance a single figure or letter may become. He was very happy to state that these variations were now disappearing. He had recently sent home new corrections, some of not considerable importance (in one instance exhibiting the imperfect name of another well-known city of Gad), and superseding certain conjectures, by proving them utterly wrong. Mr. Deutsch had been very glad to find in Captain Warren's "squeeze" that which he could not discern in his tracing, viz., an indication of the letter 'sh' in the name of Moab's father, whereby it indeed became a compound of Khemos, though perhaps not that assumed by many, after Mr. Ganneau, viz., Khemoshadad. Mr. Deutsch alluded to the number of decipherments, translations and hypotheses to which this stone has given rise, and dwelt upon the fact that, apart from the precise date of this King Moab, which was a most point, little was doubtful of that which really existed on, or off, the stone. The great fact of this interesting monument was clear at first sight; also, that the monument was that of a Moabite king—Moab—who, after a brief record of himself and his father, tells of certain deeds of war from which he issued victorious; further that the names Israel, Omi, Khemoshadad and a number of well-known Moabite cities occurred up and down, and that indeed part of the stone was a record of the king's (Moab's) buildings or of improvements in these cities, while the decipherment and translation were to speak of the king's military and political achievements.

Klein appear in none of the materials extant, and if accurately copied, would be of considerable import. One line seems to exhibit the word "Taman" (runners, militia, executioners in O. T.) in connection which seems to point to some imaginary work after a battle, while another distinctly reads "Taman to [the] right." This was the place mentioned by Ezekiel at the south-western limit of Palestine, and the juxtaposition of the two cities in question would be significant. But it was to be hoped that these had survived in the original, and were among the recently acquired new fragments, so that full opportunity might be given for further examination. As long as there was any hope of the recovery of one single scrap of material, so long must the final investigation remain in abeyance.

EXPLORATIONS AT JERUSALEM.

A meeting of the parties interested in the great work of exploring the sacred places of Palestine, was held at London, at which Messrs. Warren, under whose immediate directions, the explorations at Jerusalem are being carried on, read a highly interesting paper, in which he said:

There are at present engaged on the works two corporals of engineers and about seventy masons of different races, and though the latter required great supervision, yet, what with the jealousy of races and religion, the dragon being Greek and the over-seers Jews, anything going wrong soon "cropped out." Very few articles found in the works had come to hand, and what had been found consisted mostly of pottery, bronze nails, and glass (the former of many different dates, and the glass of the third and fourth centuries of the Christian era); but a few Hebrew coins had been turned up. Among the findings was a seal with characters showing it to be that of "Hagai, the son of Shebaniah," and it was supposed in Jerusalem to be of the time of Ezra. However, the main object of the work was with regard to the Temple, Jerusalem in its topography, and it was desired patiently to lead out where the Temple stood. In studying the Holy Land it was most disappointing to find a dearth of evidence as to the site of the Temple, and the more the matter was looked into, the more difficult it became. There are points which are known beyond contradiction, such as Jaffa, Jerusalem, and others; but when details were sought there was the most conflicting evidence.

All parties agree that the Temple stood somewhere in a rectangular spot, called by the names of Haram and Moriah, and that the Mount of Olives was on the whole part of a hill indicated on the map. It was probable, too, that the valley of the Kedron could be traced; and if he had made use of Biblical hints in speaking of places, he did so because they were more received generally, and not because they were established as such. The explorers must be content, he feared, to bring out Jerusalem as it was, for, starting as it might appear, they had not a single fixed point from which to commence. For instance, though the Temple was known to be on a particular space (the Moriah area), yet there was space there for three such sites, and Mount Zion was put to the north of Moriah by some, and to the west by others of authority. It was only by patient investigation that hope could be entertained of a satisfactory conclusion. He then proceeded to describe the Haram, area in which he said there was a mine of information. The Moriah area was scooped out into large tanks, and one would hold one million gallons of water; and was found capable of holding seven hundred thousand; and altogether about five million gallons could be stored away. Near here was a place called the Well of the Leaf, of which the legend was told that a man wandered down it, and coming to a door, opened it. He found himself in a beautiful garden, and plucking a leaf, he returned. On telling his tale, he was greeted as a liar, and of little sense for leaving a garden which his listeners believed to be a Paradise, which he would not have another chance at seeing again. The gallant officer continued at some length, and explained that the stables of Solomon had been discovered as well as streams of water, which led to the opinion that the course of Hezekiah's hidden spring of water would be discovered. He concluded, amid warm cheers, by expressing the interest taken in the works by those who are called the Anglo-Saxon race, from both Britain and America.

The Roumanian States' loan for railroads to the amount of six million guilden, had but poor success at the exchange of London. The most prominent Jewish banking houses opposed it openly. "We do not wish to have anything to do with the loan of a country that maltreats our co-religionists, as in the days of the middle ages." "We shall not only not participate in this loan, but refuse all business in Roumanian stocks." The loan was hereby spoiled, and the Jews proved that the welfare of their race is regarded higher than seven per cent.

Eight after the Roumanian loan followed a Spanish loan at five per cent., to the amount of 23,181,000 guilden, issued by Rothschild, guaranteed by the quicksilver mines of Admides. As Spain obtained for a long period from all persecution of the Jews, the Jewish funds took a lively interest in the loan, and within two hours the whole amount was taken up.

Dr. Emanuel Blumenfeld, a distinguished barrister-at-law of Lemberg, has recently been nominated a member of the Imperial Council. Amongst the Polish Jews of Galicia, there are many eminent men whose merits are but rarely acknowledged, and still less rarely sought after by these diligent workers for the public good. The distinction now conferred upon this eminent Jewish lawyer, and the Order of the Golden Cross of Merit which now decorates his breast as an additional distinction from His Imperial Majesty, must, therefore, be looked upon as tokens of high appreciation of the many lasting services rendered to the public by Dr. Blumenfeld, and as a special honor to the much-beset Polish Jews in general.—J. R.

Austria.—An action was brought against the Journal Freiheit, published in Graz, for a somewhat vigorous article it had inserted against the pamphlet of the Archbishop of Salzburg. The editor was however acquitted. "The article is very violent," said the judge; "but it must be acknowledged that the invective against the Jews contained in the pamphlet deserves to be branded, as it is really a matter of serious regret to see every day the means of a certain party, under the cloak of religion, employs to transgress the laws of the land, and to deprive the people instead of enlightenment."—J. ## SUPERSTITION.

All famous nations of antiquity who attained a civilization of their own, and of whom history has left us any records, were addicted to superstitions and idolatrous practices. Egyptians and Phoenicians, Assyrians and Persians, under the guidance of their priests, were steeped in superstition, and no monstrous dogma was too revolting for them. The false religions of Greece and Rome systematized and expanded the evil, rendered idolatry more sensual and attractive, and struck such deep roots into the heart of misguided humanity, that a cure of the disease became a problem of extreme difficulty. Torrents of light since shed by true Revelation and science, and centuries of experience and moral teaching, have scarcely yet sufficed to dissipate the last phantoms evoked by the monster, superstition.

Superstition and idolatry are two branches of the same stock; they have the same origin, and bear the same baneful fruits. Man in a state of barbarism and ignorance, knowing little of the laws of nature, and having lost the original notions of the true attributes of nature's Author, which must have been once imparted to the elect few of antiquity—found himself in his weakness exposed to the infirmities of his nature, and to the physical incidents of his home—the earth. He looked about in abject and ignorant terror, and sought assistance and relief anywhere. He sought them from the luminaries of heaven, from lightning and thunder, from all the elemental forces to which he attributed an independent power and a will; and he fell in adoration before them.

When some vague and confused traditions of an invisible and superior Deity mingled with these sentiments, man still addressed himself to the visible, as intermediate powers, to which he supposed the government of the invisible world to be entrusted, or as interceding media to be propitiated. The masses, always more excitable than their leaders, required visible and tangible gods, and gave additional grossness to the delusion; thus they made fetiches, lures, and penates, idols of wood and stone, images of all created things, to which individuals and nations bowed down in worship. Not content with imitations of material objects, human imagination peopled the world with spirits also, to which it attributed supernatural faculties and influences, and in this direction the human mind rushed to the most deplorable excesses.

Witchcraft, and all other kindred arts, were born of, and wholly founded on superstition. They assumed the existence of intermediate Satanic or other powers, having some control over men's destinies, mostly for evil, and the possibility of communing with, and influencing them by secret arts. In many instances these powers were supposed to be antagonistic to the Supreme Deity, and yet exercising an irresistible action. In the present more enlightened state of the world, we laugh at such notions, and we recognize them as contrary to Divine truth, to human reason, and to the righteous principles of the universal government of Providence.

But in olden times, and in the morbid state of the human mind which prevailed before the diffusion and acceptance of Divine Revelation and scientific knowledge, superstitious belief in supernatural things was almost universal. Knaves and impostors, and ambitious men aspiring to the dominion of the human mind, and professing the service of the Gods, under the names of magi, soothsayers, augurs, priests, and monks ever fostered the belief among the masses, adjusting its forms to the forms of the religion of the age. Witchcraft and sorcery, magic and necromancy, divination and charms held for too long a time the control of the mind, and their disastrous effects upon society may be learnt in every chapter of history. They gave unchecked flow to the worst human passions, and masked or lent excuses for the most atrocious deeds from which the moral sense of man must recoil. A nod of a priest of Memphis, or an oracular whisper of a priestess of Delphi, was sufficient to authorize inhuman cruelties, or licentious and disgusting orgies. At the bidding of a monk, frenzied mobs rose against and butchered individuals of whole classes, said to have poisoned rivers, or brought on plagues by demoniacal agency. Only the other day, the ear of Juggernaut mangled to death numbers of deluded fanatics. Through superstition, tyranny and barbarism, cruelty and rapacity have enveloped mankind, as it were, in a dark cloud of misery, rendered life bitter and precarious, and retarded the diffusion of knowledge and the advance of civilization.

Alas! these calamities have continued to a great extent even in comparatively modern times, because some of the modern forms of religion have had engrained on them the old pagan notions of mediating and interceding powers. The nations to whom revealed truth began to be preached could not wholly divest themselves of their own traditional ideas, and a compromise with these appears to have become necessary to secure victory in the main. Thus, the religion that was adopted by the great majority in Europe seemed to favor the elements of belief which, in ages of ignorance, gave rise to witchcraft; and, in times past, even some of its ministers made themselves conspicuous in solemnly conjuring evil spirits, and in promoting superstition and all its bad consequences. Even men of talents and genius were carried away by the prevailing current of thought, and in this respect were no wiser than the deluded crowd. Fanaticism is almost inseparable from superstition; and if we want to point out one among the many great historical examples of its effects, we have only to open the bloody page of the Crusades, from which we derive the fact that the ardent preachings of a hermit, and the lust of power of a Pope, could once so inflame the minds of men as to cause Europe to be overrun by fire and sword, towns to be laid in ashes, torrents of human blood to be shed, and rapacity, cruelty, and religious frenzy to afflict the world for two long centuries.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.—The French have suffered defeat after defeat at the hands of the victorious German army, and are now retreating towards Paris, closely pursued by the Prussian cavalry. News of another great battle is momentarily expected. In Paris, the Republican and Orleans factions are creating a revolution. The Prince Imperial has been sent to London for safety. Everything seems to indicate that the end of Napoleon's dynasty is approaching.

ZION LODGE No. 4, A. J. O. K. S. B.—At a regular meeting held August 3d, the following officers were duly installed by the officers of the M. W. The Boston Express says: "The FOLIO is the largest, handsomest, best and cheapest musical journal in the world." The publishers offer to send a specimen copy, containing one dollar's worth of new music, beautiful songs and piano pieces, to any one, free. Address White, Smith & Perry, Boston, Mass.

INDEPENDENT SOCIAL CLUB.—On Tuesday evening last, a charming ball was given by the above named club, at Mozart Hall. The music was excellent, and dancing was kept up till early next morning.

OLD AND NEW.—We have received the August number of this excellent magazine. The same contains very interesting and well written reading matter, and should be in the hands of every family.

THE Grand Agricultural and Horticultural Exhibition of the Mechanics' Institute, will open on Monday, August 29th, at the Pavilion Building, on Union Square.

A GOOD NOMINATION.—Mr. Alex. A. Austin, who has so ably filled the responsible position of Tax Collector of this city and county for the last two years, been has nominally nominated by the Democratic County Committee, as candidate for the same office. All citizens, independent of party, who have the welfare of our city at heart, will, we are sure, vote for him.

FIRE COMMISSIONER.—Mr. John Rosenfield, well known in commercial circles, has been nominated at the Democratic County Convention, as Fire Commissioner.

A STAMBLING TALKER.—Hundreds die annually from neglected coughs and colds, when by the use of a single bottle of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, their lives could be preserved to a green old age.

[From the Resident Correspondent of THE HEBREW.]
New York, August 2d, 1870.

EDITOR HEBREW.—When two months ago it became my sad duty to acquaint you with the death of the highly honored President of the H. O. A., Joseph Fatman, Esq., I little thought that only so short a time afterwards my pen would have to advise you of the demise of his associate and successor, Benjamin Nathan, Esq. But oh! what a different tale is this than the other. If a man dies within the circle of friends, whose tears and sighs are comforting in the last moments of earthly existence, we have at least the sad consolation that the clockwork which nature had prepared and wound up, has run out, having run its appointed course. But when the blood-stained hand of the cursed assassin causes life-blood to gush forth from the human body, when in perfect health, then the angel of civilization is weeping.

Benjamin Nathan, the philanthropic millionaire, the President of the Mount Sinai Hospital, which but lately received from him the munificent gift of $50,000, the President of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, the President of the Nineteenth Street (Portuguese) Synagogue, has been murdered in his own house during the dark hours of night, between Thursday and Friday last. Living in Morristown, N. J., during the hot season, he came last Thursday to the city to keep the "Jahrzeit" (commemorating the day of death) of his mother, according to ancient custom. In the evening he visited his brother-in-law, Rev. J. J. Lyons, of the Nineteenth Street Synagogue, and then turned his steps homeward to his princely mansion in Twenty-third street. Shortly after twelve o'clock, A. M., he yet conversed with one of his sons, whose sleeping apartments are directly above his own, and then retired. But he soon got up again to write out some check, when the assassin approached and dealt him a fearful blow with a blunt iron instrument. Now a fearful struggle must have ensued, for his fingers were broken, this being caused by being knocked upon for the purpose of causing them to relax their grasp. The inhuman monster that planned the foul deed was not satisfied with mere murder, for the corpse bears unmistakable evidence of having been clubbed some time after life had been extinct. No trace whatever of the murderer remained, and "in deepest mystery is shrouded that cruel deed of a dark night."

The first who knew of that dastardly outrage was the victim's oldest son, Washington, who rose at 6, A. M., to call his father for the Synagogue. Entering his apartment in his night-cloak, a horrible sight met his gaze. There, near the door lay the father—lifeless, and we might say, shapeless. Many wounds covered the body, and blood had saturated the whole carpet in the room. The son in his night-cloak ran down stairs and shouted police, and murder. When the police entered they took all precautions they could. The house, its occupants, the rooms, &c., were guarded, but in vain. The coroner's inquest could not clear up the mystery, and although our whole police and secret detective force are on the alert, yet no clue has been obtained. Rewards for the discovery of the murderer have been offered by the family, the Stock Exchange, the Mayor, the Governor, and the Sheriff, amounting to $55,000, and it is hoped that the inhuman monster, whoever he be, will be brought to justice.

The burial of the deceased took place yesterday forenoon, at ten o'clock. The street was densely crowded, and a hundred carriages formed a line. The plain, impressive Hebrew burial service was read by Rev. J. J. Lyons, the deceased's brother-in-law, who then, in words which touched everybody, enlarged on the noble virtues of the murdered man. Present were the Mayor, A. Oakley Hall, many high officials of the city, the whole Board of Stock Exchange, the Rabbis of most of all the congregations, and countless multitudes of people of all faiths. Everybody felt that this city has lost one of its noblest, most charitable citizens. The Jewish community has suffered a loss from which it will not easily recover, and well might we say, "how are the mighty fallen!" Most of the charitable societies have passed resolutions, expressing their sorrow and grief.

A curious co-incidence is that on the night of the execrable deed, the brother-in-law of Mr. Nathan, Judge A. Cardozo, was robbed; but it is generally believed that the two are entirely different affairs. As it might be imagined, the city is in a highly excited condition, and the wildest speculations about the murderer are rife. The flags on official buildings were at half-mast yesterday, and all business in Wall street and on Stock Exchange, was closed. May it never again fall to my lot to send you the sickening details of such crime; and may the All-merciful Father pour his balm within the wounds of the distressed widow and children of this victim of greed for filthy lucre.

And now to merrier affairs. The Sahwerens Association lately held a fine picnic, from which they realized several hundred dollars. The arrangements were perfect, and most of the guests left only when Aurora reminded them that there is a time for working as well as for dancing. Gabriel Turk, the President of the society Gamlioth-Chessed-shel-Emeth, was the recipient of a finely engrossed and enframed set of resolutions from the members of this society. He was unaware of all the proceedings, and therefore quite surprised when they were tendered to him on last Sunday. The engrossing is as finely done as we have ever seen it, it having been done by our artist, Adolph Levaszky, who has reaped great honor in his profession as a writer.

Truly yours,

YERITAS.

THE HEBREW ORIENTAL QUESTION.

[From the "Jewish Times."]

[CONCLUDED.]

Nor is there any reason of alarm for the modern Jew. The fierce sectarianism and uncompromising conservatism of the Polish Ossid and the Sephardic mystic will soon give way before the brilliant, warm sun of American freedom, comfort and common school education; just as we leave off our winter coats at the arrival of spring, without any effort or regret. We must bear in mind that the Oriental conservatism, (besides being the general feature of those regions, where everything is more stationary than in the West), is the best moral and social safe guard against the Russo-Greek propagandism, against absorption in Moscovite semi-barbarism. An enlightened Pole having been asked why he clings to Papacy: "Why," he said, "Catholicism is our best shield against Russia." And even so is conservatism and Chasidism against Apostasy, to the Oriental Jew. But let him live here a while, appreciate the free institutions of the country, find out that he will not be disliked for his religion, but for ignorance or bad habits or unscrupulousness; let him bring some comfort to his family, mingle his children with American children, and his fierce sectarianism will soon give way. One prejudice after another, one bad habit after another will disappear, to make room for the broad American tolerance, the good common sense, the excellent public school, in one word, to the United States, civilization and liberalism.

4th. The above considerations will sufficiently tell by themselves what kind of emigrants we ought to assist and encourage; young men and women who want and who can work. Men and women not above forty, having already a trade, or at least a pair of young working arms, provided with a testimonial of honesty from their local Kahal, endorsed by some European authority, the "Alliance," the Konigsberg or some other committee, shall be well received here, provided for in the first days of arrival and help on to get work. They shall not be suffered to augment the list of parish paupers. They shall be urged on to work. Let them make their living in the sweat of their brows, but in honor and conscience, and this will be their initiation into American liberty and civilization.

5th. Where shall we get work for them? That there is work in the United States, that hands and brains and crafts are not superfluous in America, no one will doubt. The question is only how shall we find out where these hands are wanted? Here is my proposition:

For twenty-eight years has been rising here, under the name of I. O. B. B., a body of men daily increasing in numbers, in wealth and intellect. This body now counts many thousand members, divided up in Lodges, local, district, and constitutional. The programme of this body is majestic, it includes the great interests of the Jew, the citizen, and the man. Until to-day this body has been trying only its gigantic forces in weak attempts at charities and insurances of its own members. But it is high time that this growing power should prove that such an assemblage of brain and treasure is able and willing to execute some great task. Such an important task is now before us. Ye noble chiefs and leaders of the I. O. B. B., here is a generous work for you, a work salutary to universal Israel and to American Israel, extremely useful to our United States fellow-citizens and to our fellow-men at large. Let the entire Order B. B. take up the task of an "Emigration Society."

Let every Lodge throughout the entire land appoint a committee of active men to inquire for and keep a register of all opportunities for work, farming or domestic, mechanical or commercial, or any other industry. Let them be constantly in communication with the central authority of the Order, and immediately new immigrants arrive, give them a hearty welcome and send them to such places where their capacities are wanted. This scheme is practical, prompt, easy, not incurring any expenses, requiring only zeal, love, brains and activity.

ROUMANIA.—The deplorable excesses which have recently taken place at Nicoreschti, Bakoan, and at Botochani, if they did not amount to a wholesale massacre, were none the less cruelties of a very aggravated character. For what could be more horrifying than what the defenseless Jews experienced in these places at the hands of their cruel and merciless oppressors? The New Free Press, of Vienna, gives minute details of the gross outrages to which the Jewish population resident in the towns above mentioned were for several consecutive days subjected. Did any Jew show himself in the streets of the town, he was pelted with stones; did he shut himself up in his house, his residence was forcibly entered by the brutal students, and his wife, children, and aged parents outraged, beaten, and horribly illused. When applying for protection to the police from outdoor indignities, the protectors (Heaven save the mark!) ordered the Jews to keep within doors; and when the students forced their way into the Jews' homes (not their castles in this instance) these amiable protectors took no steps whatever to restrain the mob, but studiously kept aloof. These disgraceful scenes were only stopped after the poor Jews had drunk the bitter cup to the full, and the thirst for violence and plunder had been satisfied. Why should such barbarous outrages be viewed with complacency? As the Ethiopians can not change his skin, not the leopard his spots, it is evident that the Roumanians are past arguing with; therefore, the European nations ought to bestir themselves and propose a remedy, and put it into operation ere it be too late.

$1,000 REWARD is offered by the proprietor of Dr. Pierce's Alt. Ext. or Golden Medical Discovery for a medicine that will equal it in the cure of all diseases for which it is recommended. For Bronchitis, severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty by its wonderful cures, and hundreds of the best physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. As a cure for Pimples on the face, Eruptions, Blotches, Scrofulous diseases, and "Liver Complaint" or Biliousness, it has never been equaled. Sold by druggists. The genuine has Dr. Pierce's private Government Revenue Stamp, on the outside wrapper.

FIRE AT CONSTANTINOPLE.—While individuals of all nations and creeds have been sufferers by the late calamitous fire, it is worthy of notice and though not a single Jew lost his life on that occasion, still the largest sum given by one family, viz., 25,000 francs, for the relief of the sufferers has been contributed by a Jewish family—the Camoudos.

Deutsches Theater.

Mit der Aufführung am vergangenen Sonntag beendete unser Deutsches Theater eine Reihe von Vorstellungen, deren guter Erfolg wohl das beste Zeugnis dafür ablegt, daß dieselben meistens wohl über dem Niveau des Gemüthlichen sich erheben. Von Seiten der Direction des Theaters war aber auch alles gethan worden, um durch ein hübsches Repertoire und durch Herbeiziehung neuer und frischer Kräfte dasselbe auf eine Stufe zu heben, die es sich den besten Deutschen Theatern Amerikas an die Seite stellen läßt. Daß Anerkennung den Mühen und Anstrengungen derselben nicht fehlte, dafür liefserte der Erfolg, der das ganze Unternehmen fruchtete, den besten Beweis. Noch einen andern Grund giebt es jedoch, weshalb Direction sowohl wie Künstler unter aller Anerkennung im besten Maasse verdienen, und der ist, daß sie im Deutschen Theater und ein Institut gründeten, das uns immer wieder mit dem alten Vaterlande in Verbindung setzt, und das uns, wenn wir auch hier eine zweite Heimat gefunden, und damit die Rechte und Pflichten dieses Landes übernommen haben, doch nie vergessen läßt, uns als Deutsche zu fühlen, und in dem fremden Lande deutschen Brauch und deutsche Sitte aufrecht zu erhalten. Wägen daher die Leiter unseres Theaters auch in dem neuen Elemente auf dem einmal eingeschlagenen Wege beharren, und darauf befestigt sein, das Theater zu einem dem Deutschthum würdigen Institut zu erheben.

Den Inhalt der Abschiedsvorstellung am vergangenen Sonntag bildete die Zauberposse „500,000 Teufel“ von Jacobson. Was das Stück an und für sich betrifft, so giebt es als Bezeichnung für dasselbe zwar nur zwei Worte und die sind „höherer Witz.“ Trotzdem amüsirte dasselbe, da dieser Witz doch wenigstens voller Humor und Witz war, besser, wie so manches geistreich sein sollende Lustspiel. Ueberdies vereinigte sich noch brillante Ausstattung und gute Durchführung, die ganze Vorstellung der ihr vorangegangenen würdig anzureihen. In den Hauptrollen zählten besonders Frä. Wolff, Sulfuria, und Herr Rube, Kette, zu den gelungensten Partien. Frä. Wolff, die hübsche lebenslustige Teufelin, die die Männer so gerne hat und Herr Rube, der personifizierte Reichthum, gehörten unbestritten zu den besten Darstellern des Abends. Eine besondere Würze verlieh Herr Rube seiner Rolle durch die Couplets, die er in derselben geschickt einzuflechten wußte, und die meistens mit vieler Satyre und Witz ausgestattet waren. Ein hübsches Pendant zu den Vorstehenden bildete des Teufels Großmutter und ihr gewungener Anbeter Cerberus, ein paar ergötliche Charaktere, durch deren hübsche Durchführung sich Herr Maret und Herr Grant allen Beifall erworben. Herr Scheerer überraschte uns mit der wohlgeleiteten Maske Loui's, in der er als Höllenfürst auftrat, gleichsam als wollte er in prophetischem Geiste dessen baldiges Schicksal voraussagen. Der Pispax der Frau Genee war ein recht gesunder durchdringender Junge, dessen munteres Spiel nicht verfehlte, den besten Eindruck zu hinterlassen. Bei der Waise der in dem Stücke mitwirkenden Personen wäre es zu viel, jedem derselben die ihm gebührende Beachtung zu schenken, von den Uebrigen sei deshalb nur noch erwähnt, daß sie nach besten Kräften sich bemühten, zu dem guten Erfolge des Stückes das Ihrige mit beizutragen.

Bei der heute im Metropolitan Theater stattfindenden Vorstellung zum Besten der Verwundeten der Deutschen Armee bedarf es wohl kaum noch erst der Ermahnung, sich an derselben auf das zahlreichste zu betheiligen, da ihr Zweck schon ganz allein für sich spricht. Um irrigen Ansichten vorzubeugen, wollen wir jedoch noch hinzufügen, daß von der Direction allein diese Benefizvorstellung veranstaltet ist, daß also die Schauspieler auf ihre betreffenden Gagen nicht Verzicht geleistet haben, was für die Einzelnen auch ein zu unvorbildungsmäßiges Opfer wäre. Gewiß aber werden die Schauspieler nicht ermangeln, durch Sammlungen unter sich ihrem Patriotismus Ausdruck zu geben.

Wir müssen uns öfters verwundern, wenn wir Kinder mit Schuhen umherlaufen sehen, aus denen sie die Feten hervorströmen und damit nicht nur das Geln ihrer Eltern, sondern auch ihre Gesundheit ruiniren, während für eine Kleinigkeit mehr Schuhe mit Kupfer-Tips oder die schönen Silber-Tip-Schuhe gekauft werden können, die diesen Uebeln abhelfen.

GRAND PROMENADE CONCERT.—The two Grand Promenade Concerts given under the direction of Mr. Levy, the Cornet King, at the Mechanics' Pavilion, have proved a perfect success, the immense hall, splendidly decorated and brilliantly lighted, being filled with a highly fashionable audience. The fountain of pure eau-de-Cologne, surrounded by flowers, attracted universal attention. The caelest lights were displayed with great effect. The music was really excellent, and the cornet solos of Mr. Levy were deservedly encored. To-day and to-morrow evenings, the third and fourth Concerts will take place.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—Dupres & Benedict's Minstrel Troupe opened at this house on Monday night, to a full audience, and received great applause. The troupe, which contains some excellent actors, is one of the best minstrel troupes that has ever been here. On Saturday afternoon a grand matinee will be given.

THE Eleventh Re-union of McCarty Brothers' and Sisters' Juvenile Class in Dancing, will come off on Friday evening, August 19th, at the Pavilion, on Union Square.

HAYES PARK.—On Sunday next, a grand festival and excursion of the Oripia Guard, will take place at this delightful place of resort. A grand concert and ball will take place.

THE CITY GARDENS.—A new era has been inaugurated at this pleasant resort. The cornet solos of the world-celebrated Levy, and the splendid music by Schlott & Schmitt's band draws thousands of the elite of this city to the gardens. A really grand programme is offered for the concert on Sunday afternoon, next, and we are sure that thousands of lovers of real music will be present.

WOODWARD'S GARDEN.—Of all the places of recreation in and around San Francisco, Woodward's Garden is the most beautiful as well as the most instructive. We do not know which to praise most, the splendid botanical display, the fine and rare menagerie, the picture gallery, hot house, or the many other attractive features of his oasis in our city. Every Sunday a grand concert is given by an orchestra composed of some of the best musicians in our city.

The effect of long continued constipation, is to weaken the system, and depress the spirits. The blood thickens, the head aches, and a train of evils is superinduced, called by the various names of dyspepsia, liver complaints, jaundice, bilious eruptions, etc. The cause of these diseases can best be cured by Dr. Walker's Vegetable Vinegar Bitters, which act naturally upon the liver and bowels. It is a permanent tonic, instilling fresh vigor into the vital forces, giving energy to the whole being.

RECENTLY A COMMUNICATION APPEARED in the public press of this city, asserting (which is doubtless true) that in much of the Candies sold in this city Terra Alba, or Chalk, was an ingredient largely used in their composition, and that the coloring matter was of a poisonous nature. M. H. GARLAND, 328 Market street, Proprietor and Manufacturer of the well-known Corona Drops and Aromatic Mastic Candy, desires the public to know that his Confectioneries and Candies are perfectly pure and harmless, and he will give $1,000 to any Chemist or other person who can discover Terra Alba, or any poisonous substance, either in the composition or coloring matter, in any of the Candies or Confectionery manufactured by him. M. H. GARLAND,

The Vital Statistics of California

Show that periodical fevers and acute and chronic disorders of the stomach and bowels, are among the most prominent and fatal diseases in this State. Disobedience to the laws of health, as regards diet; the use of pernicious stimulants; and the wear and tear of business excitement, and of "fast life" generally, have much to do with the prevalence of those maladies in our cities; while in the interior and especially in the gold-yielding districts, they are chiefly due to malaria, unwholesome water, and the exposure and privation incident to life in new settlements and mining camps. Now, it is a fact that it is as possible to protect the human system against these maladies, as to guard life and property against the incursions of assassins and thieves. Strengthen the vital organization with HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, and it becomes as capable of resisting the active principle of epidemic or endemic disease as a fire-proof safe is of resisting the action of combustion. This is the experience of thousands who have remained unscathed by malarious disorders in the sickliest seasons, while their neighbors, who have neglected to tone and regulate their systems with this unequalled medicinal stimulant, have fallen thick and fast around them. Weakness invites disease. Vigor repels it. Help nature to fight the good fight with infection, whether it be in the air, the water, or the soil, with this matchless preparation—a compound of the rarest vegetable extracts with the purest of all diffusive stimulants.

Time Tests the Merits of all Things. FOR THIRTY YEARS PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER has been tested in every variety of climate, and by almost every nation known to Americans. It is the almost constant companion and inestimable friend of the missionary and the traveler, on sea and land, and no one should travel on our lakes or rivers without it.

It is a speedy and safe remedy for burns, scalds, cuts, bruises, wounds and various other injuries, as well as for dizziness, diarrhoea, and bowel complaints generally, and is admirably suited for every race of men on the face of the globe. Be sure and call for and get the genuine Pain Killer, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine. Directions accompany each bottle. Price—25 cents, 50 cents, and $1 per bottle. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

FURNITURE.—It is an object of interest to all heads of families to know where they can purchase good and substantial furniture and bedding at reasonable rates, especially at these times when the holidays are close at hand. We recommend all in want of any goods of the above description to call at the furniture warehouses of Mr. A. J. Shaber, No. 707 Market street, near Third, who has the reputation of selling first-class goods lower than any other firm in this city.

PARTIES residing in the southern part of the city, and wishing to secure a meal in a really first-class Family Restaurant, should not fail to patronize the establishment of Mr. E. F. Swain, 636 Market street. All the delicacies the season affords can always be had there, while the attention leaves nothing to be desired. The place is open till after the close of the theatres.

PHOTOGRAPHING.—We verily believe that Messrs. Bradley and Rolofson are entitled not only to the confidence, but the gratitude of this entire community for the many improvements made in the art of Photography. They are pre-eminently the leaders of the art in San Francisco. Go and see their "Rustic" and Marine Photographs. If you want a good picture go to Bradley & Rolofson.

TUCKER & Co., Nos. 101 and 103 Montgomery street, have just received the largest and finest assortment of Watches, Watch Chains, Jewelry, Diamonds, Silverware, Moss Agate, Quartz Jewelry, etc., ever offered for sale in the city, and at greatly reduced prices.

TO PHYSICIANS.

NEW YORK, August 15th, 1868.
Allow me to call your attention to my PREPARATION OF COMPOUND EXTRACT BUCHU. The component parts are BUCHU, LONG LEAF, CUBEBS, JUNIPER BERRIES.

MODE OF PREPARATION.—Buchu, in vacuo. Juniper Berries, by distillation, to form a fine gin. Cubebs extracted by displacement with spirits obtained from Juniper Berries; very little sugar is used, and a small proportion of spirit. It is more palatable than any now to use.

Buchu, as prepared by Druggists, is of a dark color. It is a plant that emits its fragrance; the action of a flame destroys this (its active principle); leaving a dark and glutinous decoction. Mine is the color of ingredients. The Buchu in my preparation predominates; the smallest quantity of the other ingredients are added, to prevent fermentation; upon inspection, it will be found not to be a Tincture, as made in Pharmacopoea, nor is it a Syrup—and therefore can be used in cases where fever or inflammation exist. In this you have the knowledge of the ingredients and the mode of preparation.

Hoping that you will favor it with a trial, and that upon inspection it will meet with your approbation.

With a feeling of confidence,
I am, very respectfully,
H. T. HELMBOLD,
Chemist and Druggist 19 Years' experience.

[From the largest Manufacturing chemists in the World.]

NOVEMBER 4, 1864.

"I am acquainted with Mr. Helmbold, he occupied the Drug Store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where others had not been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise."

WILLIAM WEIGHTMAN.
Firm of Powers & Weightman, Manufacturing Chemists, Ninth and Brown Streets, Philadelphia.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, for weakness arising from indiscretion. The exhausted powers of Nature which are accompanied by so many alarming symptoms, among which will be found, Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of Memory, Wakefulness, Horror of Disease, or Forebodings of Evil; in fact, Universal Lassitude, Prostration, and inability to enter into the enjoyments of society.

The constitution, once effected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. If no treatment is submitted to, Consumption or insanity ensues.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, in affections peculiar to Females, is unequalled by any other preparation, as in Chlorosis, or Retention, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated State of the Uterus, and all complaints incident to the sex, or the decline or change of life.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH will radically exterminate from the system diseases arising from habits of dissipation, at little expense, little or no change of diet, no inconvenience or exposure; completely superseding those unpleasant and dangerous remedies, Copavia, Mercury, in all these diseases.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU in all diseases of these organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing. It is pleasant in taste and odor, "immediate" in action, and more strengthening than any of the preparations of Bark or Iron.

Those suffering from broken-down or delicate constitutions, procure the remedy at once.

The reader must be aware that, however slight may be the attack of the above diseases, it is certain to affect the bodily health and mental powers.

All the above diseases require the aid of a Diuretic. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU is the great Diuretic.

Sold by Druggists everywhere. Price—$1.25 per bottle, or six bottles for $6.50. Delivered to any address. Describe symptoms in all communications.

Address H. T. HELMBOLD, Drug and Chemical Warehouse, 594 Broadway, N. Y.

NONE ARE GENUINE UNLESS done up in steel-engraved wrapper, with facsimile of my Chemical Warehouse, and signed H. T. HELMBOLD.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth.

Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

The BROOKLYN has gained a reputation for being foremost in important improvements in the business of Life and Endowment Insurance, and in many respects it presents features unequalled in liberality to the insured by any Company represented on this Coast; among which is the Total Removal of ALL Restrictions on Travel, or Residence in any part of the Globe; that every Policy is Non-Forfeitable; and has the Cash-Surrender-Value of each year endorsed thereon. They would be pleased to have their friends and the public call at the Agency and investigate the superior inducements offered by the BROOKLYN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

REMEDY

This Remedy does not simply relieve for a short time, but it produces perfect and permanent cures of the worst cases of Chronic Nasal Catarrh, and I will pay $500 reward for a case that cannot cure. "Cold in the head," and Catarrh of Headache are cured with a few applications. If you have a discharge from the nose, offensive or otherwise, stopping up of the nose at times, partial loss of the sense of smell, taste or hearing, eyes watering or weak, feel dull, have pain or pressure in the head, you may rest assured that you have Catarrh. Thousands annually, without suspecting half of the above symptoms, terminate in Consumption and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive or less understood by physicians. I will send my pamphlet on Catarrh to any address free. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy
